About the Challenging Behaviour Foundation

The CBF is the only UK charity focussed on the needs of people with a severe learning disability with behaviour described as challenging and those who support them. There are three strands to the CBF's work:

- Information and support: Developing and sharing a range of accessible, practical information and resources to equip and empower families and professionals, to promote early intervention and prevention, support families whose relatives are at risk, and provide casework to families in complex situations.
- 2. Campaigning and influencing: Informed by family support work, this strategic work focuses on ensuring that children and adults with a severe learning disability and behaviour described as challenging and their families are included, engaged and represented in policy and practice at a national, local and individual level.
- 3. Promoting best practice: There is a range of evidence and practice that demonstrates how children, young people and adults with a severe learning disability and behaviour described as challenging can be supported to have a good quality of life within their local community. The CBF is committed to actively sharing and promoting evidence based best practice, including working with researchers and practitioners.

Workshop Content and Delivery

The workshops were delivered by two co-trainers: a family carer with lived experience of caring for a family member with a severe learning disability and behaviour described as challenging and a qualified Positive Behaviour Support professional who delivered the 'theory' and evidence-based knowledge, giving each participant the tools to understand the people they are supporting and develop strategies to reduce challenging behaviour.

- Practical communication strategies
- How to improve partnership working between families and professionals

Attendance & Evaluation

Feedback forms were completed by attendees at the end of each workshop. Questions covered what aspects they found helpful and what they enjoyed about the workshops, by means of open comments and selecting responses to set statements, ranging from "strongly agree", "agree", "disagree" to "strongly disagree". The results are set out in table form below.

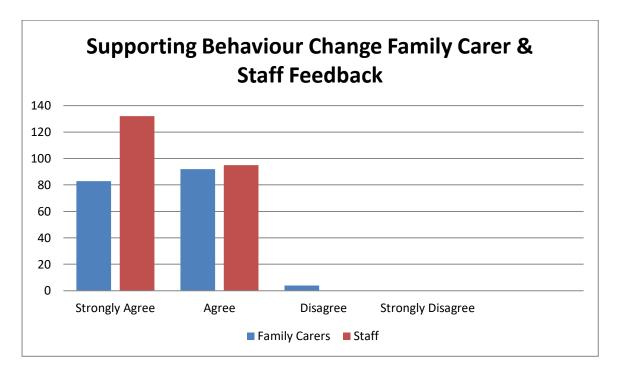

Attendees were asked to complete a questionnaire with 4 statements and to tick a box to record their level of satisfaction for the workshop where strongly agree and agree indicated a positive outcome for the person; disagree and strongly disagree indicated a poor outcome for the person. 5 free-hand questions were also included and results for these can be seen below. See appendix 1 for full document.

Family carers reported they enjoyed the session as a whole but of particular use to them were the topics on: reasons & functions for challenging behaviour; communication & challenging behaviour; story of success (from the lived experience of the family co-trainer); sharing experiences through discussion; recording using ABC charts; analysis of why challenging behaviour might happen and the informative & friendly co-trainers; co-presenters attitudes just great – "we are all one team together, not them lecturing us". Good ideas we can implement; supportive/friendly; targeted for specific age groups something to consider.

Staff reported very similar outcomes and were pleased to hear "real life" situations rather than made up ones and the input from the family trainer made the session feel "more real and relevant". The opportunity to share experiences with colleagues was also a positive outcome for them; they enjoyed the small, interactive session; described workshop as "informative", "fun" and "upbeat".

Attendees were asked to complete a questionnaire with 15 statements and asked to tick a box to record their level of satisfaction for the workshop where strongly agree and agree indicated a positive outcome for the person; disagree and strongly disagree indicated a poor outcome for the person. . 5 free-hand questions were also included and results for these can be seen below. See appendix 2 for full document.

Family carers felt the interaction between school staff and carers was something they found very helpful – the discussions were described as "really effective and reassuring"; most thought the course did not need and improvements though 2 people felt more time on Amber strategies would have been beneficial to them. Carers spoke positively about the co-trainers.

Staff were very positive about the structure of this session – the opportunity to sit with family members whose children they support in school was important and productive. The training was found to be enjoyable and inclusive; some staff would have liked more time to talk in group discussions.

All family cares and staff said they would recommend this course to others.

Our family carer co-trainer subsequently met with a grandparent who had attended both workshops in Kendal with her daughter. She stated she was really pleased to see our trainer and wanted to pass on just what a difference the course has made to their lives. They no longer see their child as naughty and she said as a result of what they were taught they have changed everything they do and he has come on leaps and bounds since the changes have been made.

At the Carlisle workshop, a family carer approached the CBF workshop co-ordinator to say she had used the information and discussion in the first workshop to reflect on her understanding of her child's behaviour, how she reacts and how she can modify her reactions to create a better home environment for all family members
